No. 304.—Under section 146 of the Sea Customs Act, 1879, as amended by section 4 of the Sea Customs (Amendment) Act, 1914, and in accordance of the rules published in notification No. 319, dated 23rd July 1915, on pages 1185-1187 of Part I of the Port St. George Gazette No. 218 August 1915, the Director in Council is pleased to make the following rules for ascertaining and denaturing spirits imported into the Colonies. Spirits shall be denatured as follows for the purpose of the law under which a special duty is imposed on denatured spirits and for ensuring reported spirit is so denatured. They will come into force at once:—

(1) Denatured spirit is spirit mixed with light camphoraceous and pyridine bases wholly made from a mineral source as per specifications appended at word spectra, or other special denaturants approved by the Board of Revenue, in the manner laid down below.

(2) Spirit denatured with light camphoraceous and pyridine bases may be imported by sea. Spirit mixed with wood naphtha or other special denaturants can be imported only with the special sanction of the Board.

(3) Whenever spirit is imported which is said to have been denatured and on which it is proposed to pay duty on import, the Customs Collector shall send a sample of such spirit to the Board's Laboratory for examination and report. On receipt of this report the Collector shall decide whether the claim shall be admitted or not. The Collector shall not admit the claim if the spirit is of less strength than 50° overproof and unless the importer satisfies the Collector that he is duly licensed to transport and possess such spirit. In the case of imports by sea from other Possessions, a certificate from the Collector of Customs at the port of shipment to the effect that the spirit is not of less strength than 50° overproof and that it has been fully denatured with the prescribed denaturants may be accepted in lieu of the Board's report.

(4) Spirit that has not been denatured in accordance with the prescribed methods either shall be denatured or shall pay duty at the full strength rate.

(5) Imported spirit may be denatured under the supervisory control of the Customs Department by the addition of light camphoraceous and pyridine bases, provided (1) that the light camphoraceous and pyridine bases to be mixed with the spirit must first be tested and approved in the Board's Laboratory, (2) that they must be kept under lock and key by, and be used under the supervision of, the Customs Collector, (3) that they must be used in the proportions of half a gallon of light camphoraceous and half a gallon of pyridine bases to 50 gallons of the spirit and (4) that the spirit shall not be of less strength than 50° overproof. Similar conditions apply to the use of wood naphtha, in the special cases where its use is permitted, with this difference that one part by volume of crude wood naphtha of a strength not less than 50 per cent overproof shall be mixed with nine parts of spirit. The Board's sanction should be obtained in cases of special methods of denaturing for spirit intended for use in particular arts and manufactures.

(6) Any expense which may be incurred by the Collector of Customs in denaturing spirit or in ascertaining that it has been denatured shall be paid by the importer.

(7) The quantity of denatured spirit which may be removed from the Customs House on any one day shall not exceed the limit prescribed in the rules made under sections 10 and 11 of the Maldives Act of 1914. The Customs Collector will issue an advice promptly at each issue of denatured spirit that he issues to the Inspector of the Customs in which the spirit is contained.

(8) When any such spirit is reported in excess of the limit permitted, the importer may bond such excess part of the measurements of the whole.

ANALYSIS.

Official Laboratory tests to ascertain the reliability of samples of light camphoraceous and pyridine bases for denaturing alcohol.

Light Camphoraceous

1. Nature.—By 'camphoraceous' is meant the liquid obtained by the dry distillation of vulcanized rubber. By 'light camphoraceous' is meant the liquid obtained by redistilling 'camphoraceous' and selecting that portion which passes over at or below about 220° C.

2. The specific gravity of light camphoraceous.—The specific gravity of light camphoraceous at 10° F. should be between 0.84 and 0.85 referred to water at 50° C.

3. Boiling test.—For the purpose of this test 100 c.c. of light camphoraceous should be redistilled in the pyrexine testing flask (see specifications for pyridine bases). Under these conditions not more than 16 c.c. of distillate should pass over at or below 180° C., whilst a total (including the foreproduct) of at least 75 c.c. should pass over at or below 220° C.

4. Admixture of soluble constituents.—When 25 c.c. of light camphoraceous are shaken with an equal volume of water in a stoppered graduated cylinder and the time is allowed for the liquid to separate again into two layers, the light camphoraceous should show no appreciable dissolution or residue.

5. Neutrality.—The aqueous layer obtained from test 4 should show no marked acidity or alkalinity when tested with both red and blue litmus paper.

6. Test of mineral impurities.—At least 70 per cent of the light camphoraceous should be soluble in concentrated sulphuric acid. For testing this 50 c.c. should be measured off into a test tube fitted with stopper and immersed in a beaker of water. After each addition of acid, the cylinder should be shaken and cooled to avoid loss of volatile constituents. Sufficient acid must be used (usually about 10 c.c.) for the high refractive layer to become quite fluid so that it can separate readily from the upper layer of unreacted constituents. After a final thorough shaking and cooling the cylinder layer by layer should be poured off. The clear oil which upper layer should be again shaken with strong sulphuric acid and separated as before after cooling. It should finally measure not more than 1 c.c. The acid used should be of specific gravity 1.84 and may be of commercial quality.

7. Freedom from water.—Light microscope slides should not contain any appreciable amount of water. Any other engaged in drawing samples for test should verify on the bottle that he has drawn the sample from the bottom of the containing vessel where the water, if present, will be found. For this purpose it should employ a syphon tube of which the shorter limb reaches to the floor of the containing vessel. He should also assure himself that the sample is collected in a bottle free of moisture.

Pyridine Tests.

I. Colour.—The colour must not be darker than that given by 5 c.c. of distilled water solution dissolved in one litre of distilled water.

II. Absorbency with water.—Twenty cubic centimetres of the pyridine base should give a clear mixture with 40 c.c. of water, or else a mixture only as slightly opalescent that after standing for five minutes, ordinary newspaper type is clearly visible through a layer 15 mm. deep.

III. Amount of water present.—From 10 c.c. of the pyridine base mixed with 20 c.c. of caustic soda solution (density 1.4) at least 100 c.c. of the base should separate, after having been repeatedly shaken together and allowed to stand.

IV. Titration.—Dissolve 1 c.c. of the pyridine base in 10 c.c. of distilled water. Titrate with normal sulphuric acid until a drop of the mixture gives a definite blue spot on compressed paper (the blue colour should at once disappear). At least 10 c.c. of the normal sulphuric acid should be required to produce this reaction. (To prepare the compressed paper, dissolve one gram of compressed in one litre of distilled water. Soak filter paper in this and then dry.)

V. Calcium chloride reaction.—Vigorous shake together 10 c.c. of a solution of 1 c.c. of pyridine base in 100 c.c. of distilled water with 5 c.c. of a 5 per cent solution of dry fused calcium chloride. A dense crystalline precipitate should immediately result.

VI. Boiling point.—Distil 100 c.c. of the pyridine base in the manner described below. At least 80 per cent should distil over at or under 140° C.

Method.—One hundred cubic centimetres of pyridine base are placed in a short-necked copper flask of about 200 c.c. capacity. The flask is arranged on an asbestos stand which has 5 conical holes of 30 mm. diameter cut in it. In the flask is attached a functioning column (consisting of a tube 33 mm. wide and 170 mm. long, provided with one bulb) of which the side tube (passing 1 cm. above the bulb joint) is fitted with a Liebig's condenser of which the cooled part is at least 400 mm. long. A standard thermometer is placed in the head of the column so that its bulb occupies the centre of the bulb of the column.

The speed of distillation is adjusted to 5 c.c. per minute, the distillate being received in a graduated glass cylinder. At least 80 c.c. should distil over at or under 140° C. at a barometric pressure of 760 mm.

If the barometric value from 760 is less, a correction of 1° C. for each 10 mm. of variation should be applied (e.g., under 770 mm. of pressure 80 c.c. of distillate should come over at or under 140° C., whilst under 750 mm. the same amount of distillate should come over at 138° C.).

Note.—Pyridine proper is a single substance composed of C_5H_5N boiling at about 100°. Pyridine base, an admixture of pyridine with slowly added compounds being at various temperatures. Dry the sample and open others frequently than the pure pyridine.

* The above scheme is that specified in the German Government's Regulations and has been suggested for adoption at being a sample from Malacca in 1907 chemical laboratory. The note within brackets is an extension only, of course, to facilitate when available.
